

|            |  |
|------------|--|
| script     | A set of text instructions fed to a program known as an interpreter or engine.                             |
| method     | In JavaScript, a built-in function.  |
| anchor     | An anchor element is used to create a hyperlink.   |
| URL        | The Uniform Resource Locator is an address of a web resource.  |
| web server | A web server sends requested information to a web browser.   |
| deprecated | A term used to describe a function or attribute that is no longer part of a standard.                      |
| CSS        | Cascading Style Sheets, which dictates the appearance of HTML elements.                                    |
| event      | An action, such as loading or clicking, that happens in an HTML document.                                  |
| DOM        | The Document Object Model allows different technologies to interact with a web page.                       |
| engine     | Another word for interpreter, which is software that reads and executes a script's instructions.           |
| HTML       | HyperText Markup Language, which is code used to identify the function of certain parts of a web document. |
| render     | The act of a web browser displaying the contents of a web page.  |
| W3C        | The World Wide Web Consortium publishes the standards that oversee web-related technologies.               |